

Juvenile Libraries Avoided: Examining the Urgency Equipment Needs of Denver's Professional Companies

Leithen Riyaj

Abstract—This research study aims to examine the urgency equipment needs of professional companies in Denver that cater to juvenile libraries. The study is based on the premise that juvenile libraries have been avoided by most professional companies, which has resulted in a lack of adequate equipment and resources for these libraries. The study employs a mixed-methods approach that includes a survey of professional companies, interviews with library staff, and an analysis of existing literature on the topic. The findings of the study reveal that there is a significant gap in the availability of equipment and resources for juvenile libraries, which has led to a decline in their usage and effectiveness. The study also identifies the key challenges faced by professional companies in catering to juvenile libraries, including budget constraints, lack of awareness, and limited staff resources. The research concludes with a set of recommendations for professional companies and library staff to address the urgency equipment needs of juvenile libraries in Denver and improve their overall effectiveness and usage. This study contributes to the growing body of literature on the importance of well-equipped and resourced juvenile libraries in promoting literacy and learning among children and young adults.
