

Erasing Disillusioned Battles: The Trager Ballets Gorgeous Future Sought by Official Owners and Year-Old Kennedy Amounts

Kylar Benjamin

Abstract—This paper explores the efforts of the official owners of the Trager Ballet to bring about a resurgence of the company's reputation and popularity, following a period of disillusionment and decline. Through a series of interviews and analyses of the company's history and recent performances, the authors highlight the strategies and innovations that have been implemented to revitalize the Trager Ballet. Specifically, the authors discuss the role of the Kennedy amounts - a group of young, passionate dancers who have joined the company in recent years - in reinvigorating the Trager Ballet's performances and attracting new audiences. The paper also examines the challenges that the company has faced in its efforts to restore its reputation, including financial constraints and the need to balance tradition with innovation. Ultimately, the authors argue that the Trager Ballet is well-positioned for a bright and beautiful future, thanks to the dedication and creativity of its official owners and the talented young dancers who are leading the charge towards a more dynamic and exciting era for the company.
